

PRISM Mentor: Abdul-Majid Khan, M.D.

Student names appear in alphabetical order: Joseph Aderemi, Meaghan Berns, James Bobco, Paula Chen, Connie Chon, Mohamed Daklallah, Eliana Ege, Jasmine Gite, Joshua Green, Sophia Khalil, Nicholas Kondoleon, Stephen McKeown, Alicia McLeod, Luke Odisho, Ash Police Reddy, Rachel Saban, David Schoenfeld, Michaela Soriano, Alison Thomas, Patrick Vecellio, Maayan Yakir, and Jennifer Ziebell

Dear Dr. Khan,

Thank you for your time, guidance, and support. You have been an amazing mentor who went above and beyond making sure we were well supported in each stage of medical school.

The first week of medical school, when we were really anxious and nervous, you sent us an encouraging message, a diagram of how success can be compared to an iceberg, demonstrating how hard work and dedication are not what people see because it is what we are busy doing behind the scenes. And in the end, it is the sacrifice, discipline and disappointments that make us stronger.

You were a beacon of light that kept us calm and encouraged during the stressful stages of medical school. Your words of encouragement and guidance truly had a remarkable impact, not only as a student, but also now as physicians entering our respective fields.

You reminded us that individual physicians can make a large impact on the world. Thank you for always being so down-to-earth, willing to see things from the students' perspectives, and giving honest advice. You were a huge part of our four years at OUWB!

The "Khan't Touch This" PRISM group