Description: Students who have academic or professional goals that are not easily met by one of the regular degree programs at CSU Dominguez Hills may find that the Graduate Interdisciplinary Studies Program is more suitable to their unique needs and interests. Through this program, students can integrate studies from two (or more) departments or schools, either concentrating on each equally or choosing one department or option as the primary emphasis with the other(s) as secondary. The Graduate Interdisciplinary Studies Program is intended to be a focused, pre-planned progression toward well-defined objectives. Students will need an appropriate advisory committee chosen from the departments involved. The program of study for the Graduate Interdisciplinary Studies Major must be chosen from the represented departments and must be supportable by: (1) courses already offered in the regular degree programs; and (2) the expertise of members of CSU Dominguez Hills permanent faculty.
