

Master of Arts in HumanitiesProgram Path:*INTD Type: Unrestricted IDSProgram Type: Foundational INTD Program

Description: For intellectual growth and, accordingly, for professional development, the Master of Humanities Degree Program offers a broad range of flexible, interdisciplinary opportunities for graduate study. Because of the inherently interdisciplinary nature of study in the humanities, students are encouraged to explore questions from complex perspectives, rather than to concentrate efforts and specialize in questions from within a single academic discipline. A student's program of study might focus on a historical period, a cultural region, a social or artistic theme, and may combine, for example, ancient and modern cultures, literature and politics, philosophy and the arts or history and religion. The program is defined by its flexibility. Students design their own curriculum, pursue part-time or full-time study, and attend day or evening classes. It has a broad scope because courses may be drawn from offerings throughout the College of Liberal Arts or in other colleges when they are appropriate in terms of a student's goals and focus.
